coveyence of two streets, the building is basically triangular in plan with a tower at the northernmost point.

The masonry bearing walls are brick construction, with finished brick exteriors trimmed with contrasting bands of stone. The pitched roofs, originally slate, are copper clad.

The main entrance portal on the Avenue is gothic-arched, surmounted by a crocketed gable, and a handsome bas-relief seal decorates the apex of the Avenue of the Americas side. The polygonal base of the tower is surmounted by a series of pointed-arch windows. Above this point, the circular shaft of the tower rises to an iron balcony supported on stone brackets at lockout level. Crowning the tower are four clocks which are in turn surmounted by a high pyramidal roof.

Extensive interior changes have transformed the original courthouse into a library. The grand stone staircase leading from the first to the second floor remains a focal point in the new plan. It is crowned by an iron spreader and a domical ceiling. Other important reatures include handsome wood paneling, and door and window enframements. Stained glass windows may be seen in the corridors and stair tower.
